Fox Talk, acrylic and marker on wood. Ashley Kesling

Ashley Kesling believes that humans have lost their ability to see the true nature of their surroundings. Her work is primarily about the communication between animals. Using color, line, and pattern she presents animals the way they see one another and the world around them. She says, "My intense connection with animals stems from my childhood. My mother, who has Cherokee ancestry, instilled in me a great respect for fur and feather alike with beautiful Native American folk stories, and the patterns I use in my work are influenced by traditional Native American pattern work." See more of the artist's drawings and paintings at www.ashleykesling.com.

Kesling has exhibited her work at Flux Factory, Long Island City, NY; Heidi Cho Gallery, NYC; Artists Space, NYC, and is currently participating in Emerging Patterns at 14 Maple Gallery, Morristown, NJ. She holds a B.A. in Studio Art from Wake Forest University and M.F.A. in Painting from Parsons School of Design. Kesling is currently the Local Arts Development Coordinator of the Passaic County Cultural & Heritage Council at Passaic County Community College in Paterson, NJ.
